What's new in Girls Cairo Papyrus:

A typical 2-D dungeon is:* 3 or 4 rooms (plus one "ancillary" room)* Wall tiles cut into 4 hexes, for taking turns* Extra rooms* A "treasure room", which may or may not contain a boss* A "frog room", whose only use is to defeat a boss immediately after its completion If an ancillary room is found to be too small, just draw one new hex to make the room larger, and skip over the new tile using a special "skip" field. No random number generator - just manually draw four squares in a room The board of a dungeon is made of four sides, each of which has one escape path. (This is so that if your turn is already un-decided, you can still get out of the game.) A "room" has 4 walls and is represented with a single square. If the # of squares is a multiple of 4 (eg, 8, 12, 16,...), then your start tile is also a room. The number of "rooms" in a dungeon is the same as the number of sides in a traditional dungeon (i.e., 3 in a 4-sided room). No wire-frame walls - the tiles are of the same size as they would be if the walls were there. (This makes the map easier to visualize.) It is possible to save a dungeon at any time, and return to it whenever it is convenient. There are several features that make Dungeon Maker easy to use:* Single-click interface* The map can be rotated up to 90 degrees (for vertical buildings)* Place-automation, which means that the dungeon will be created by a computer program, and it will be configured the way you have it set up* Completely automatic "map seed" generation, so that every game has a unique set of walls and treasures* Maps can contain "floppy monsters" and "floppy doors", so that much detail can be easily added without dramatically increasing the size of your map file  This is the new version of the script, numbered "100". From 1-100, the respective scripts were nicknamed "Nahtzee0", "Nahtzee1", "Nahtzee2", etc. Dungeon Maker is distributed as a set of standard scripts and possibly a customized version. Following is a list of scripts that come with Dungeon Maker.

It is part of a Dyson sphere constructed by an advanced civilization in our Sol system. The Dyson sphere is a metallic structure surrounding the star and being inhabited by lifeforms of an advanced civilization, leaving a path in the surface of the planet not unlike the path left by the tires of a planetary ring. We know of a race of beings that are equally advanced in computing, mathematics, and other related fields, that called themselves the Sudunes. We have managed to establish communication with this race and gotten some assurances of goodwill. We've just received a vessel from them, and it should be arriving in orbit of Earth in the next 24 hours. This information is classified, but we believe it to be more important to reveal than to keep secret. We have been able to create some sort of approximate docking of the two vessels. They are basically just two metallic spheres, with one a lot larger than the other. They look very similar, so much so that a person unfamiliar with them would not be able to tell the difference. It will take them, what, a few more days to finish docking, and then we'll be able to send a small landing party on to the surface to inspect the world. The intention is to have the pair of vessels detach, one of them goes to the nearby star system, and one of them goes to Earth. We have decided that this information will be made public, to give people a chance to see and to better understand what is out there. The purpose of doing so is to give humans a greater opportunity to speak to a civilizational race about the existence of such a race, and about their intentions. What we
